3. Data description

- According to the OECD, Official Development Assistance is government support that is specifically "designed to promote the economic and social development of developing countries."

ODA is an internationally recognised measure agreed within the OECD Development Assistance Committee (DAC). It comprises financial flows provided by official agencies to developing countries, their nationals, or international organisations for the benefit of developing countries. Private contributions and charitable donations are not recorded as ODA.

Other Official Flows are public sector transactions that do not meet the criteria for ODA. OOF includes grants to developing countries for representational or predominantly commercial purposes; bilateral public transactions intended to promote development but with a grant element of less than 25 %; and bilateral public transactions which, regardless of their grant element, are primarily intended to promote exports. By definition, this category includes:

- o export credits granted directly to a recipient of development assistance by a government agency or institution (official direct export credits);
- o the net acquisition by governments and central banks of securities issued by multilateral development banks on market terms;
- o subsidies (grants) to the private sector to facilitate its lending to developing countries; and
- o funds to support private investment.

The DAC List of ODA Recipients is generally revised every three years by the DAC on the basis of the World Bank income classifications.
